Bull Run Charity Music Festival Raises $12K

BY WES FEESE
EDITOR

The rain came down and the thunder rolled, but the party didn’t stop Saturday night as late arriving storms could do nothing to drive away the remaining two or three hundred attendees at the fifth annual Bull Run Charity Music Festival. With event organizer Easton Bryant jamming onstage alongside John Capps, a rain-soaked and muddy crowd savored the last few minutes of a daylong program that raised more than $12,000 for Relay for Life, Kosair Children’s Hospital, and the WHAS Crusade for Children.

“I thought it ensured that the crowd was pleased with the event when so many people opted to hang around and gather in the pavilion instead of dashing to their vehicles when the weather hit late in the evening,” Bryant says. “That was definitely one of the highlights of the night.”

The late-night jam session capped off a full day of fun and music at Bull Run, which began in the morning with a 5k run and picked up steam early in the afternoon when the largest crowds began rolling in.

Attendees were treated to food catered by Stacy Hatcher, vendors were on site selling t-shirts and koozies, a face-

Adair County Grand Jury Indicts Fifteen

BY BLAKE SPIRES
ASST. EDITOR

The Adair County Grand Jury handed up indictments last week on 15 individuals on a variety of charges. While most indictments were related to drugs, forgery, or possession of stolen property, one more violent charge was handed up.

David Edward Tishar, 48, of Columbia was charged with two counts of wanton endangerment in the first degree for his alleged June 2 firing of a Ruger 300 magnum rifle into a semi truck operated by Steve Helmick and including a passenger, Monica Saulter, following a verbal altercation between he and Helmick.

In other indictments, the Grand Jury handed up charges to the following:

- Justin K. Bledsoe, 21, on one count wanton endangerment in the first degree; one count of tampering with physical evidence; and one count of leaving the scene of an accident.
- Dakota J. Biggerstaff, 21, on two counts of wanton

Annual Outdoor Expo Returns This Weekend

BY BLAKE SPIRES
ASST. EDITOR

After last year’s installment launched the event to heights unimagined upon its inception half a decade ago, the 2014 South Central Kentucky Outdoor Expo returns on Saturday with yet another bigger and better program.

“It feels like this one has been a long time coming,” event organizer Terry Partin said in an interview on Monday. “This will be our fifth year, and it’s by far our biggest show we’ve had yet.”

Partin says that one of the main focuses of the Expo, outdoor and wildlife vendors who set up their various booths inside John Burr Memorial Gymnasium on the campus of Adair County High School, have been sold out of space for weeks now, and that, true to its name, some of the Outdoor Expo is moving outside for this year to accommodate the additional vendors interested in showcasing their products.

“We’ve outgrown the space available, and rather than locate to a new city, we’re going to utilize the outdoor area we have,” he explained.

More than 100 vendors are registered to set up inside the gym, and Partin says they continue to add registration for the outdoor space as well. In all, Partin expects more than 30 brand new vendors at this year’s event, in addition to the return of those from previous years, who have expressed a fondness for the show. Last year, some vendors sold out of products altogether before the end of the one-day event, and several have pledged to bring even more goods this time around.

In addition to the vendors, another highlight of the Expo will again be the various seminars provided throughout the day. Returning from last year, professional angler Mark Menendez will be providing two seminars—one on tactics

The Weekly WORD

Editorial Commentary
Written By
Wes Feese, EDITOR

As a member of the media, I follow the news—local, national, and international—more closely than I ever thought I would, and get my information from more outlets than would have been humanly possible just a decade or two ago.

This point dawned on me earlier this week when I was watching The Daily Show, a liberal, comedy-driven news program that also satires the stories it reports. The topic of discussion on the show was media’s evolution, and how the way news is reported and consumed has changed so much since the 1990s. The point the host, Jon Stewart, seemed to be making was that we have to be more diligent than ever in where we get the news though, because objectivity so often takes a backseat to agendas and propaganda. This is somewhat ironic, since The Daily Show is far from unbiased, but I think the point is still valid.

I get my news nowadays from everywhere. Twitter and facebook are the quickest and most diverse ways to get information, because everyone participates, but it’s important to be discerning because there are no fact checkers or editors in place to ensure accuracy, or even that the story you just read is true. A perceptive ear and an eye for bias are essential now, but skepticism shouldn’t be limited to what one reads on social media.

On the other side of the coin, newspapers and television news programs present a more traditional method of getting current information, and—since they are bound by journalistic ethics—should be more accurate, if less up-to-the-minute, than social media. “Should” is the operative word here though, because even the most highly-esteemed journalists and media outlets today all seem to on one “side” or the other. It’s impossible to be the “best” anymore, because people don’t want the best, they want to hear something they agree with, and there are more options than ever now to make sure that’s a possibility.

Conservatives can watch FoxNews and only have their previously held beliefs reinforced. Liberals can do likewise with MSNBC. Moderates, or those that believe themselves to be more objective, can watch CNN and be treated to very little news whatsoever. Some might object to these labels, but this only further illustrates the subjectivity involved in today’s media coverage and consumption.

Working for a newspaper puts me in a unique position in regards to this changing news dynamic. In some ways, papers are at a disadvantage. We print once a week, but even if we were a daily, other outlets would still break stories before we do. Most breaking stories now unfold in real time, on social media, and are brought to you by your friends and family, not a journalist.

This fact doesn’t diminish the service that papers and other, traditional media provide though. I actually think it enhances it, if we’re willing to embrace the challenge and adapt. Our own twitter account, @AdairProgress, is still a work in progress, but it does give us a means to bring bits of information to readers as soon as it becomes available. Conversely, our printed stories, while limited to being published only once a week, provide more thorough reporting and commentary than could ever fit in a 140-character tweet.

Overall, I think it’s a good thing that media is changing. The fact that it is more inclusive means that the stories people care about will remain in the news, because everyone’s part of the story nowadays. There are more options than ever available to consume the news, highlighted by the growing influence of internet journalism. I won’t even say that any certain method—radio, TV, internet, or newspapers—is a better option than the others, because I think they all depend on each other. Each offers a specific advantage that cannot be found elsewhere, and each has its own limitations. The most important thing, to me, is being able tell fact from opinion, and recognize when an ulterior agenda undermines objectivity.

Knifley Community Homecoming

A Knifley Community Homecoming and Festival will take place on Saturday, September 6, 2014. there will be a complete slate of activities from Pancake Breakfast to a Concert and Fireworks Display, and many things between the two.

The following biographical sketch was printed in 1887 and is produced here as it originally appeared. No addition or corrections have been made to the original. Presented here for those who find our county and family history of particular interest. MW.

Rev. Joseph Knifley was born in what is now Taylor County, Ky., then Green County, December 10, 1809, and is the fourth of five children born to Philip and Sarah Mourning Knifley, who were of English and Irish descent, respectively.

Philip Knifley was born in Pennsylvania in 1777. While yet a young man he came to what is now the southeastern part of Taylor County, Ky., but was at that time a part of Green County. Here he bought wild land and subsequently improved a farm, upon which he resided until 1814, when he sold out and bought another farm in the north part of Adair County, on Casey Creek, upon which he remained until his death, in August 1862. From early life he was a devoted member the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. His father was most of his life engaged in agricultural pursuits in his native state of Pennsylvania. He was a veteran of the Revolutionary war and died in Green County, KY., aged nearly a hundred years.

Mrs. Sarah Mourning Knifley was born in Ireland in about

SECRETARIAT: DEDICATION TO THE SUPER HORSE

A FEATURE COMMENTARY BY PAM CAPOZZIELLO

Thoroughbred racing has introduced us to some of the most amazing horses in history. As far as historical moments stand, the greatest one on record comes from the one and only Secretariat.

Born March 30, 1970 on Meadow Farm located in Doswell, Va., he was sired by Bold Ruler and Somethingroyal.

A large, chestnut colored horse, Secretariat reminded us of another champion and legend, Man O War. He had three white socks and a white star on his nose, and was also known for wearing his blue and white blinkers when he was racing.

Nicknamed “Big Red,” his name was given to him by his owner’s secretary. Secretariat was owned by Penny Chenerly and her husband, Christopher, and was the result of a coin-toss decision for breeding purposes.

While growing up, the Chenerly’s were well aware they had a very special horse on their hands. At 3 years old, Secretariat measured 16 1/2 hands and weighed 1,200 pounds. He had to have a special-fitted saddle made just to fit his large, muscular body. He was very feisty and full of himself but never mean to anyone; he loved to pose for the cameras.

Secretariat’s racing record remains unmatched to this day. At 3 years old, he raced in the Kentucky Derby and set a new track record, and then he did the same in the Preakness Stakes. The most memorable moment of all time came in 1973 when he won the Belmont Stakes for the Triple Crown. This was the first time in 25 years a horse had won the prestigious award. That day he set a new world record of two minutes, 24 seconds, and won by a staggering 31 lengths.

No one will ever forget that day. He raced like a locomotive train leaving all the other horses so far behind they needed to use a special wide angle lens to view the huge lead he had, and even with the bigger lens one could barely see the other horses. It was just a good day for him and he felt like running, while Ron Turcott, his jockey, was just there for the ride.

When the horse was only 2,

Eddie Sweat became Secretariat’s groom. Eddie’s first impression of his new friend was that he thought Secretariat was fat and clumsy and ate too much. He nicknamed him “Ol’ Hopalong” and found him to be a bit on the wild side. It wasn’t too long before Sweat was able to tame him though and showed him he was the boss.

Mr. Sweat was hired by the Chenerly’s because of his track record with horses. He was known to have that special “touch” with them and they trusted their prized Secretariat in his hands for the best possible care he could get. The two of them developed a very long and special friendship that lasted until both passed away. They had the utmost respect for each other, and one special way the two greeted each other was when Secretariat would stick out his tongue and Eddie would just shake it like a hand and ask him how he was doing.

Secretariat retired to stud at age 3 and lived his final years at Claiborne Farm in Paris, Ky. He had a fairly active stud life, siring as many as 600 foals. Sadly, there were no male offspring of his same caliber.

On Sept. 4, 1989, at age 19, Secretariat was stricken with laminitis. This is a very painful disease of the hooves and there is no cure for it. The disease causes inflammation of the laminae, which connects the coffin bone to the hoof wall. The actual cause of the disease varies from poor digestion from grazing and eating grass to complications of a high fever. It is also possible for certain bloodlines to be at higher risk for getting it. It can affect any of the horse’s legs but is predominately found in the front hooves.

Secretariat battled this horrible disease for about a month, then one day it unfortunately reoccurred. There was nothing more that could possibly be done for the prized horse and I am sure they had all the best doctors and treatment 1784. While yet a child, however, she came with her parents to what is now Taylor County., Ky. Her death occurred about 1818 or 1819. She was a life-long member of the Separate Baptist Church. Her father, Roger Mourning, was one of the earliest settlers of Taylor County.

Rev. Joseph Knifley was employed on the farm until he attained his majority, when he bought a farm on Casey Creek, near “Rolla,” in Adair County, upon which he remained until about 1838, when he sold out and rented lands for some two years. He then bought the farm of 160 acres, some three miles farther down Casey Creek, upon which he has since resided, and where he has been for many years extensively and successfully engaged in farming and stock raising. He has for several years taken considerable interest in breeding blooded stock, both horses and cattle. For many years in ante bellum days, he was a captain the old State Militia.

Mr. Knifley has been twice married, first, February 16, 1832, to Miss Sallie Martin, a native of Adair County, born February 7, 1812. She was a daughter of James and Jemima Butler Martin, both natives of Adair County, and of English descent. Five children were the fruit of this union, viz: Eliza J. (Bland), now the widow of Charles H. Jones; Nancy E. (deceased), married Mr. R.M. Tucker; William W.; Mary J., now Mrs. J.C. Dunbar; and Philip H.

Mrs. Sallie Knifley departed this life January 10, 1863, a devoted member of the Christian Church. Mr. Knifley was next married, October 26, 1865, to Miss Elizabeth H. Lainhart, a native of Casey County, Ky., born December 8, 1827. She is a daughter of Christopher and Rebecca Hight Lainhart, natives of Madison and Casey Counties, Ky., respectively, and of English descent.

Both Mr. Knifley and wife are members of the Christian Church, in which church he has been a regularly ordained minister for nearly half a century. He is also an old and bright member of the Masonic fraternity, having been a member of the order for over thirty-five years, and has advanced to the Council degree of R & S M. In politics, he is a Republican, and is one of the successful farmers as well as one of the most respected citizens of the county and district.

Letter to the Editor

I would like to extend my thanks to all of Goodwill’s community supporters, donors, and shoppers for making our recent Appreciation Day (7/23/14) a success.

Thanks to the support of people in Columbia and the surrounding area, Goodwill provides job placement for thousands of Kentuckians each year. We believe in giving people the opportunity to earn a paycheck to support themselves and their families. Donations to Goodwill help people do that. Last year, we placed 2,470 Kentuckians into jobs, and we paid nearly $18 million in wages to people with disabilities or other disadvantages. I am proud that my community helped contribute to that success.

Goodwill would also like to thank the local businesses that donated door prizes for our Appreciation Day:

A Plus Computers, Anderson’s Pizza, Valeria S. Bault--Avon, Betty’s OK Country Cooking, Bluegrass Cellular, Burger King, Day & Day Feed Mill, Duo County Telecom, Durham & Zornes, Fiesta Mexico, Flowers ‘N Things, Grimsley’s Jewelry, Hot Prints, IGA, Julia’s Flower Garden, Moore’s Pool Room, Pizza Hut, Rex’s Cycle Shop, Rumors Hair Salon, Sonic, Sports Biz Printing, Taco Bell, Tractor Supply Co., United Citizens Bank, US Nails & Spa and Yogurtown.

Again, we thank Columbia residents for their generosity. Goodwill could not continue to serve people with disabilities or other disadvantages without the local donors and shoppers that fund our mission.

Sincerely,
Debra Emerson, Manager
Goodwill Industries of Kentucky

painting booth was set up, and Relay for Life teams offered an assortment of raffles and split-the-pot drawings. An auction, led by master auctioneer Nick Kemp, was a big hit as well, as donated items were sold to the highest bidder with all the proceeds going to the aforementioned charities.

"I think overall it went smoother and was more successful than ever before, primarily because we had more volunteers involved than ever before," Bryant says. "We've come a long way on planning, strategy, and organization since the first couple of years, and that's all because it's become such a team effort at this point."

Accurate attendance figures aren't available and people shifted in and out throughout the day, but Bryant says the crowd was at least as big as any they've had in the four previous installments of the festival, if not slightly bigger.

"I'm not good at guessing attendance numbers, but I would say it's the largest turnout yet," Bryant says. "I couldn't really tell where the crowd ended in any direction I looked."

Bryant also shows appreciation to everyone who helped organize this year's event, as well as to all that attended.

"I just want to thank all the perennial attendees and also the first-time attendees for showing up and supporting what we're doing," Bryant says. "I realize we're not breaking any fundraising records, but I think this event has evolved into something that unifies people and I think that's important."

With the 2014 BRCMF in the books, Bryant is already looking towards next year, where he says he'll rely on feedback from those that attended to help shape the 2015 edition.

"Seeing progress and improvement each year is great, but it also intensifies the challenge to do even better next time," Bryant says. "You learn more each year in regard to what works and what doesn't, but the feedback has been very positive thus far. With that said, I'm always open to ideas and suggestions for improvement."

Sunday Confession, a band featuring Josh Bruce, Tim Robertson Chase Skaggs, John Conover and Josh Popplewell, rocked the stage to open Saturday's Bull Run Charity Music Festival.

From left, Jacob Burton, Blake Hatcher, and Brady Bryant enjoyed some good food as well as good music Saturday afternoon at the Bull Run Charity Music Festival.

Jeff Feese stayed busy working the grill Saturday afternoon while Tyler Pelston looked on.

Marcy and R.C. Ryan spent Saturday working at the Bull Run Charity Music Festival. The couple raised money for the Breath of Hope Relay for Life team by selling chances on a gun raffle.

Kasey Bardin of the SuperBlane and Friends Relay for Life team worked this booth, which was selling Bull Run Charity Music Festival hats to raise money for Relay for Life.

Always a fan favorite, the Classic Sterlings, playing a set of classic rock staples from the 60s, 70s, and 80s, was once again one of the highlights of the annual Bull Run Charity Music Festival.

The Breath of Hope Relay for Life team was out in full force at Saturday's Bull Run Charity Music Festival, selling t-shirts and other accessories to raise money for the annual Relay for Life.

Blane Bardin, left, and Ethan Froedge were two of the younger attendees to take in the festivities Saturday afternoon at the fifth annual Bull Run Charity Music Festival. Peace!

available for that time. No one wants his or her loved ones to suffer and this disease is excruciating for the horse.

On Oct. 4, 1989 Secretariat was humanely euthanized. When he was born the earth shook, and when he died it fell into total silence. We lost our friend, a legend, and the whole world felt it.

After Secretariat passed away, a necropsy was performed on him. When his heart was observed, it was noted to look like a big, beautiful machine. There was nothing more perfect. His heart was estimated at weighing an astonishing 22 pounds, allowing much more oxygen to circulate through his blood than most horses, and greatly contributing to his unmatched stamina on the track.

A horse of royalty, Secretariat had the honor of being buried whole. Usually all winning horses are buried with just their head, heart, and hooves, and the rest is cremated, but for Secretariat and also Man O War, they were kings and were laid to rest whole.

Secretariat was buried at Claiborne Farm where he spent his entire retirement years. There will never be another like him and I feel that God wanted it that way. Even though his children inherited some of his genes, none ever came close to him. He was perfect, and that kind of perfection only comes around once in a lifetime.

We had him for 19 years and he died way too young, but I am sure he and Eddie are up in heaven laughing, talking and shaking tongues. Sadly Mr. Sweat passed away in 1998. Much love my VIP....

Kentucky Sheriff's Ranch Camp for Boys and Girls

On July 13-18, five young boys from Adair County had the opportunity to attend the Kentucky Sheriff's Ranch Camp for Boys and Girls. The camp helps teach the boys and girls character, how to be role models in their community, learn about nature, sports, getting to meet new friends and learning to help one another.

Those in attendance were: Jimmy George, Eldon Furkins, Dakota Judd, Donovan Furkins and Cristian Marcial-Davis and Sheriff Harrison Moss. All of the boys received the following awards: Naturalist, Archery, Outstanding Participation, Horsemanship, Sport of Fishing, Sports and An Amazing Award.

Jimmy's favorite thing at camp was swimming and fishing. Eldon enjoyed doing everything, but his favorite was sleeping in the cabin with his friends. Donovan's favorite thing was the swimming pool. Dakota enjoyed riding the horses, and Cristian liked the swimming pool and playing sports.

The boys want to thank Sheriff Moss for taking them to the camp. Sheriff Moss would like to thank everyone for their continued support and donations which allow the children to attend camp.

Brown Marmorated Stink Bug

The brown marmorated stink bug (BMSB) continues to appear throughout Kentucky and to date has been confirmed in over 40 counties. This invasive bug which has a wide host range has been in Kentucky for about five years, and will likely become a nuisance in fruits, vegetable, and grain crops in due time.

BMSB can develop massive populations very quickly and are apt to move into soybeans as they start to bloom and reach their largest populations as pods are filling. In vegetables, BSMB may feed on fruit and vegetables a similar fashion as native stink bugs; leaving damaged areas on the produce.

At this time, growers should be aware of BMSB and how to identify it. BMSBs look similar to other brown stink bugs in shape and color, though they tend to be a bit larger. The most diagnostic characters for identification are the two (small but distinct) white strips on each antenna near the tip end. Also, along the rear sides are a series of black and white bands.

If you suspect you have found brown marmorated stink bugs, please submit samples to the Adair County Cooperative Extension Service.

The monthly newsletter of the Columbia-Adair County Chamber of Commerce

Editor: Sue Stivers
President: J. Brandon Thompson
Feature Writer: Sue C. Stivers & Ramie Hutchison

The Purpose of the Columbia-Adair County Chamber of Commerce is to promote and enhance the Business, Cultural, Educational and Civic Well Being of Columbia and Adair County.

President’s Message

By: J. BRANDON THOMPSON

Invest In Adair County: Buy Local

Have you ever noticed how pride is one of those tricky emotions that can go either way? I mean, sadness is exclusively bad and happiness is always a welcomed feeling. But pride is either the emotion that precedes your demise or it’s that feeling that makes your chest swell, your eyes well up with tears, and that lump to form in your throat.

The negative version causes you to post one too many selfies on social media (hint: one was too many), but the positive version makes you proud of your children, your favorite sports team, your community, your country, etc.

That good pride (it sounds like an oxymoron, but I promise it’s a real thing) is the source of what has been one of our commonwealth’s most successful marketing strategies of late. The Kentucky Proud program has been wildly beneficial to homegrown businesses and products.

In fact, the newest iteration of the strategy is the Udderly Kentucky milk program which is partially produced here in Adair County. Sure you pay a little more, but I take pride in knowing my extra dollar for my gallon of milk may go to a family farm here in my hometown. And, that dollar will get spent and re-spent many times over in our local economy, which produces local jobs, which feed local families.

Just the other day in fact, while picking up my gallon of Udderly Kentucky milk, another emotion creeped in...guilt. Suddenly I realized that there are so many products and services that I can and should buy locally, but I sometimes forget because it’s convenient to pick things up at one place. I’m sure I’m the only one that does that, right?

Instead of picking up produce at the chain store, why not buy it at the farmer’s market? You can shop for your insurance at a local agency rather than online. Buy your medications at a locally owned pharmacy. Use local lawyers and accountants. Visit local doctors and dentists. Dine at local restaurants and shop with local retailers. Don’t go out of town to buy big ticket items if you can purchase them here in Adair County. Why give your hard earned money to someone you’ve never met and doesn’t appreciate your business the way someone who knows you can and will?

Every time you purchase a product at a locally owned and operated business, you are investing in people you know. You are creating jobs and putting food on local dinner tables. And that’s something that ought to make you feel really good about yourself (maybe even a little proud).

One Way To Be A Positive Business Owner or Manager

Create a “Success File” for each of your employees.

Write down every good or positive thing an employee does, and file it in the appropriate folder.

When evaluation time rolls around, you will be able to pull out a record of each employee’s accomplishments. You’ll be seen more as a “positive” rather than “negative” supervisor, who doesn’t motivate employees through fear, but by tapping into their potential

HISTORY OF FORMING A CHAMBER IN COLUMBIA

How much do you know about your local Chamber of Commerce? Did you know that a group of business leaders got together and decided there should be a Chamber of Commerce in Columbia?

The year was 1942 and it was named the “Columbia Chamber of Commerce”. It was one of the first cities in South Central Kentucky to have a Chamber. This shows that Columbia had people with Leadership and Vision. It’s a shame there are no records in the Chamber office that gives the names of the original board members. I do know that William “Bill” Walker was an active member during some of those years and continued to be actively involved in the Chamber until his death.

On the 20th day of August 1957 George Akin, John Horton, Lynn Jeffries, Alvin Lewis and Ruth Richardson met with Attorney Earl Huddleston where the Articles of Incorporations were signed changing the name to Columbia-Adair County Chamber of Commerce. Thelma Stovall was the Secretary of State at that time.

Following Secretary Stovall was Secretary of State John Y. Brown III who presented a “Certificate of Existence” to the Chamber that said: Columbia-Adair County Chamber of Commerce, Inc. is a nonprofit corporation duly organized and existing under KRS Chapter 273, whose date of incorporation is August 30, 1957 and whose period of duration is perpetual.

I further certify that all fees and penalties owed to the Secretary of State have been paid; that articles of dissolution have not been filed; and that the most recent annual report required by KRS 273.3671 has been delivered to the Secretary of State.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand affixed my Official Seal at Frankfort, Kentucky, this 4th day of August, 1998. Signed, John Y. Brown III.

Watch for the August Chamber newsletter...hopefully we will have more information on the Chamber of Commerce as we celebrate a total of 57 years of having a Chamber as of August 20th.

If any of our readers have additional information about the Chamber please call the Chamber office at 270-384-6020 or better yet stop by the office at 201 Burkesville Street, have a cup of coffee and chat with Executive Director Sue Stivers about the Chamber.

Editorial of the Month

Thoughts Are The Seeds Of Reality

By: SUE C. STIVERS, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

I tell youth that what they think about is what they will become. I really believed it and still do.

I believe the same thing about our Community and County. If we tell ourselves we are second rate, or we can’t do or have so and so, we are. If we collectively believe we have the world by the tail, we do. If you believe everything you read or hear on the street that is negative about Columbia and Adair County, we’re doomed.

Let’s look at a few good things that are happening in our City and County. It is a fact that our population is growing...people are moving here from neighboring counties and other states. Almost every week we have people coming to the Chamber office or calling on the phone inquiring about our county and gathering information because of their interest to relocate here.

The increased interest in the Agriculture industry with the expansion of the Farmers Market at the County Extension Office and Farmers Market on the Square each Saturday is really an asset to our Community. The Chamber of Commerce congratulates you on being chosen in the top 48 markets in Kentucky. This is a great honor bestowed upon our Community.

The expanded vision of the many clubs and organizations within the County is bringing in many new projects and activities that will benefit all people. Churches of all denominations have something for every person, including children and youth.

Lindsey Wilson College continues to grow and offers numerous educational opportunities not only for students but for our community. The Wares Fair which the Chamber of Commerce started 8 years ago gives businesses an opportunity to let the students, new faculty and employees know what Columbia/Adair County has to offer. We want students and employees to spend their money in Columbia...not outside the County.

The Trail Town project which is being worked on at this time will truly be an asset to our City and County. Excitement continues to grow with the new Bowling Alley and Fun Center that will be opening soon on Campbellsville Road. Our thanks to Mr. & Mrs. Barney Burns for choosing to locate the business in Adair County.

Due to space, I have only listed a few examples...the list goes on and on...about what makes Columbia and Adair County a great place to live, work and play.

I encourage you to sit down...take a pencil and paper...Make a list of all the “positive” things about Columbia and Adair County. Why do you live here? What do you like about this County? Ask your family members and neighbors why they like living here.

After you have completed the above list, begin a new list...What additions would you like to see us have? Share your list with me by bringing or mailing it to the Chamber of Commerce Office located at 201 Burkesville Street. If you prefer, you may email me at: cactourism@duo-county.com

I hope this article will encourage you to “Think Positive” about our City and County. Let’s work together to make this the best place to live in Kentucky.

SPORTS

THE BREAKDOWN
with Blake Spires

If you don't follow Kentucky high school sports, you may have missed the state's governing athletic body, the Kentucky High School Athletic Association, dropping the proverbial hammer on Cordia High School in Knott County. After a yearlong investigation, the KHSAA found that Cordia had broken eight bylaws regarding the eligibility, enrollment, transfer, financial aid, and season limitations of their student-athletes, as well as the requirements for coaches.

Cordia was found guilty of falsifying records to make students eligible for athletic competition, allowing a staff member to lease housing to the family of a student athlete without ever making payment, providing transport (even plane tickets) to athletes to relocate from out-of-state schools, providing money and clothes to athletes, paying the entire cost of education for two transfer students, holding mandatory open gym sessions both before and following the allowed time frame, and allowing ineligible players to play and practice.

Basically, they broke every rule in the book. Everything that makes high school sports high school sports was tossed to the side in an effort to gain a competitive advantage. For their transgressions, Cordia's boys basketball team is banned from playing or scrimmaging in the 2014-15 season, and from postseason play as well in 2016. They will also be forced to forfeit every game from last season, and the entire athletic department at the school is placed on strict probation until 2019, among other punishments.

KHSAA Commissioner Julian Tackett called the violations "the most wanton and blatant disregard for Association rules in its 97 year history," and said "there is apparently no person within the school or school system willing to actively and aggressively control and manage the athletic program."

The head boys basketball coach at Corida, former Kentucky Wildcat Roderick Rhodes, is implicated heavily in the violations. It's fitting that a man whose claim to fame was college basketball is caught in the most overt and pervasive recruiting that Kentucky high school sports have ever seen.

But let's be honest for a second. Corida is far from the only school doing these things. At the highest levels, this type of behavior is almost a necessity in order to really compete. Without naming any specific schools, anyone who remotely follows high school competition in this state can tell you off-the-record stories about this school or that school and how they came to have this player or that player on the roster. It's been going on for decades now, and there's zero indication that it will stop or even slow down anytime soon.

Cordia's problem was the reckless and over-the-top nature in which they cheated. That, coupled with the fact that they're a small, rural school in the eastern part of the state, means cheating was a complete death sentence. We've seen private schools essentially recruit openly for years, and we've seen large public schools in the state magically find jobs in the community at highly respected local companies when someone from outside the area has a supremely talented athlete for a child.

But that's okay. Those schools and areas are large and wealthy and powerful, and their traditions are established to the point that another run at a state title in whatever sport isn't questioned. It's a similar phenomenon as ESPN's Bomani Jones often talks about regarding the Texas area in football: when Texas is winning, no one ever seems to get caught for cheating, but when SMU, or Baylor, or Oklahoma State start making waves in the conference and recruiting, investigations are aplenty.

The same is true for Kentucky high school sports, and I suspect it's no different in any state across the country. I wrote a column at the end of baseball season about the organic nature of this year's Indian baseball and softball teams, and the authenticity of their success in the postseason because it was achieved with local players playing for their local team, and this story fits that same narrative.

It's unlikely that Adair County ever becomes a perennial powerhouse in a given sport. We'll have strong cycles of players that align with the right coaches and a time when more traditional powers are in a lull, but the replacing of the talent it takes to compete year after year is only done through recruiting—which as Cordia found out, is against the rules, assuming you're one of the many schools in the state that actually has to play by them.

But there's a certain pride in doing things that way. I'm one of the last people you'll ever hear preach on moral high ground in sport, but I do believe at the high school level, that such an integrity is expected, warranted, and should be celebrated. So while Cordia makes the headlines for being caught, and a few teams each year hoist banners won by students who were essentially bought and paid for, district and conference titles and occasional regional and state appearances will be just fine with me—especially if they're won in the future by kids I see sitting in the stands now.

Former P.E. teacher finds second chance with baseball

The following article was published last Thursday, July 24 in The Missoulian, a publication that covers the city of Missoula and western Montana. It is reprinted here with permission from its author, Missoulian sportswriter AJ Mazzolini.

The North Hardin High School assistant bowling coach paced the lanes at the only bowling alley in Campbellsville, Kentucky. His kids laughed and yelled, adding to the regional tournament cacophony created by hefty balls striking unsuspecting pins.

Derek Cape's role, the wisdom he tried to impart, was less form and technique and more geared toward the mental aspect of the game.

Focus. Confidence. Resilience.

Except Cape, a first-year physical education teacher at the school, could barely keep his own head straight on this day.

"Trying to coach these kids bowling and I can't stop thinking about going to play baseball," Cape remembered.

By the end of the day, Cape had a professional baseball contract with the Arizona Diamondbacks. Just four months later, the Kentucky-born ballplayer found himself in Missoula this June as a member of the Osprey – two years after playing his last game.

Injury derailed Derek Cape's baseball career in 2012 – not that he's sure it was headed anywhere at that point anyway. A come-back line drive off the bat clipped his right hand, his life-blood as a pitcher, and fractured the ring finger a month out from the end of his final season at Lindsey Wilson College.

"I won't ever know if it actually hurt me or not, but it didn't help," Cape laughs about it now. "My chances of getting drafted were slim to none anyway, but after that it was pretty much done."

Cape, a 6-foot-3 energetic 24-year-old with dirty blond hair and a constantly accompanying smile, hung around LWC for another year to finish up school. He served as student assistant for the baseball team and graduated in 2013 with a physical education degree.

It felt like time to move on from the game then.

"I threw batting practice to some Little League all-stars, but that's about it," said Cape in his warm and welcoming southern twang. "I was done. It was over. I was gonna finish my degree and start teaching and coaching."

Cape found an in with North Hardin near Elizabethtown – an hour north of his hometown of Columbia, Kentucky, the same one-high school town of 5,000 in which Lindsey Wilson resides.

A former Blue Raider, Ace Adcock, taught and coached ball in Hardin County and the pair knew each other dating back to Cape's middle school days.

"He was good friends with the (Lindsey Wilson) coach's son and was always around the ballpark playing catch with the players," remembered Adcock, a former LWC player and 2008 grad. "I was a graduate assistant his freshman year and we stayed in contact."

Cape began teaching at the high school last fall and planned to come on as an assistant to Adcock in the baseball program this spring. Never the kind to shy away from helping when he can, Cape also jumped on with the bowling team.

"They needed an extra guy," he said. "I bowl recreationally, but not anything as intense as they were. They were better than me."

Did he really have the expertise to qualify as a coach then?

"It was more like mind stuff," said Cape, who acknowledged his scores rarely top 150 on the lanes anymore, though he did toss a nifty 256 once upon a time.

"Having a bad couple frames and being able to turn it around," he said. "You can relate a lot of mental things from baseball to bowling. It's the getting over the last roll. Just like baseball, getting over that last pitch."

MICHAEL GALLACHER/Missoulian

Missoula Osprey pitcher Derek Cape thought his baseball career was over after suffering a broken finger during his senior season of college ball, but after watching him pitch Arizona Diamondbacks officials gave him a second chance.

During that first fall, some of the North Hardin players took part in workouts through a local baseball academy called Players'Dugout. The players threw weighted balls in the Velocity pitching program to strengthen their arms, similar to hitters taking practice swings with weighted doughnuts hugging the barrels of their bats.

"He went through the Velocity program with the kids just to get a better feel for it," Adcock said. "He was doing the program and his numbers just went through the roof, even though he hadn't played for a year and half or two."

Cape tested, hurling a regulation five-ounce baseball into a net with a running start, at 96 mph. That got a few people talking.

The Dugout's coaches and instructors – including four-year MLB pro Steve Delabar, a nearby Central Hardin product himself – worked to get Cape tryouts with big league clubs.

A Texas Rangers scout came through Elizabethtown to watch Cape pitch. Then the baseball hopeful paid out of pocket to fly to Arizona to throw for Diamondbacks scouts.

"It's perfect weather in Arizona then," said Cape, who landed in Scottsdale in January. "I was throwing in Elizabethtown inside and we didn't have any heat. It was like 40 degrees and I was throwing in sweatshirts."

The D-backs liked what they saw, but not enough to offer Cape a contract right away. There just wasn't room for him, Cape replayed the conversation; maybe after some time playing in the independent leagues.

"I don't really want to play independent ball," he thought then. "If I'm going to play, I want to play in the minor leagues. But I was going to play."

Then came the phone call – well, the first of two.

Back at the bowling tournament, Cape's phone buzzed in his pocket. The pitcher-turned-bowling-instructor stepped outside to escape the noise.

Somebody got hurt. There might be a spot. Expect a call in the

Blue Raiders Named To 2014 All-Commonwealth Football Team
Branden Cresap, Chaz Barnes and Jerry Long II earned the distinction

Three members of the Lindsey Wilson football team were named to the 2014 Kentucky Pro Football Hall of Fame All-Commonwealth Team recently at the Hall of Fame induction ceremonies in Louisville, Ky.

Seniors Branden Cresap and Chaz Barnes and junior Jerry Long II earned the preseason distinction.

The team, sponsored by Community Trust Bank, is comprised of student-athletes from NCAA Divisions I, II, III and NAIA institutions in the state.

Cresap, a Shelbyville, Ky., native, was named the 2013 Mid-South Conference East Offensive Player of the Year as he passed for 2,663 yards and 31 touchdowns. He was also an All-MS-C East First Team selection for the second time in his career.

Barnes, a wide receiver from Alcoa, Tenn., caught 27 passes for 442 yards and a pair of touchdowns in 2013. He has caught 82 passes for 1,368 yards and 12 touchdowns in his three seasons at Lindsey Wilson and was named an All-MS-C East First Team selection as a freshman.

Long II is a linebacker from Louisville, Ky. During his sophomore season in 2013, Long II led the Blue Raiders with 67 total tackles, including an 11-tackle performance in the season finale against Georgetown (Ky.). His efforts earned him a MSC East First Team selection.

Lindsey Wilson kicks off the 2014 season on Thursday, Aug. 28 against rival Campbellsville (Ky.) at 6:30 p.m. CT.

LWC Men's Basketball
Releases Schedule

17 games scheduled this season at Biggers Sports Center

Lindsey Wilson men's basketball head coach Paul Peck released the 2014-15 schedule on Monday. The Blue Raiders are set to face eight teams that made an appearance in last year's NAIA National Championship, including six programs that were ranked in the postseason coaches' poll.

Lindsey Wilson opens the season on the road at the Lou Cunningham Classic on Nov. 1 in Campbellsville, Ky. The Blue Raiders face Benedictine (Kan.) who finished 2013-14 ranked No. 14 in the postseason poll.

One day later Lindsey Wilson opens play at Biggers Sports Center as they host Ohio State-Mansfield on Nov. 2.

After a Nov. 5 meeting against Martin Methodist in Pulaski, Tenn., the Blue Raiders host three-straight home contests beginning with Miami-Middletown (Ohio) on Nov. 7. Lindsey Wilson hosts the College of St. Joseph (Vt.) on Nov. 9 before welcoming Mid-South Conference newcomer Life (Ga.) to Biggers Sports Center on No. 13.

The Blue Raiders head to Portsmouth, Ohio, for a Nov. 20 matchup with Shawnee State, followed by a Nov. 22 game at 2013-14 national quarterfinalists Georgetown (Ky.).

Lindsey Wilson returns to Columbia for the next five games beginning with the Lindsey Wilson College Classic against Voorhees (S.C) on Nov. 28. The Blue Raiders also face Robert Morris (Ill.) in the classic on Nov. 29.

Lindsey Wilson opens December with a pair of MSC opponents beginning with a Dec. 4 meeting against rival Campbellsville (Ky.) before hosting national quarterfinalists St. Catharine (Ky.) on Dec. 6. The Blue Raiders face Ohio Christian on Dec. 16 in the final game of the home stand.

Adair County native Colton Back (far right), the son of Pat Back and Jamie McQueary, was a member of the recently crowned World Series of Baseball 18-and-Under Champions, the Bluegrass Stars. Back excelled defensively and hit over .300 in the final eight games for the Lexington-based club, who captured the crown by defeating 21 other squads from across the country at last week's Grand Slam World Series in Panama City Beach, Fla. next 24 to 48 hours.

Cape felt his mind wandering. His young bowlers could sense it too.

“They even knew after I got my first call,” Cape smiled. “You don’t answer your phone unless it’s something important.”

The excitement, or rather the anticipation, was welling. Luckily, Cape’s murky future cleared in much less time than a day or two.

“An hour later they (called back) and offered me to sign right there,” he said. “I think I texted everybody that I knew.”

Less than a month later, Cape resigned from his teaching job. Adcock and the North Hardin principal understood.

“He couldn’t pass it up,” said Adcock, adding that his team missed Cape’s short-lived influence.

“He’s a very positive, very energetic person. That made a great coach,” Adcock said. “He really challenged our players. Even in the little time he was there with them, we saw a lot of improvement.”

But that was just the beginning. Pro ball hasn’t come as easy as NAIA baseball at Lindsey Wilson.

Cape led the Raiders in strikeouts with 78 in 69 2-3 innings in his final season and posted an 8-2 record in 10 games started. Starting is the key component to that statistic.

As an Osprey, Cape is a reliever.

“The bullpen has been the biggest thing, adjusting to the bullpen,” he said.

Cape’s new manager Audo Vicente sees his potential, though. He’s got a pitcher who can hit the mid-90s on the radar gun in Cape.

“He’s got good stuff, he’s got a plus fastball,” Vicente said, laying out the scouting report on his righty. “He can pitch down in the zone and he’s got a good slider and can attack the hitter. That’s the great thing about him, he’s always attacking the hitter.”

Some of those good fastballs didn’t stay down in Cape’s first few appearances in Missoula. After posting an ERA of just under 3.00 with 10 strikeouts in his first five outings over nine innings, Cape was cleaned for five runs in a third of a frame by the Billings Mustangs on July 2.

“It’s just a couple pitches here or there, then it kind of looks bad,” Cape said, referencing his 6-plus ERA.

Cape’s addition to the Osprey is more than just numbers, Vicente was quick to note. Cape comes with perspective, that the game should never be taken for granted, he said.

“He appreciates it, exactly,” Vicente said. “If you have a group of guys like Cape, you feel really good as a staff, as a manager. He’s a hard worker and he’s got that passion for the game.

“For him, it’s a blessing to be here.”

The Blue Raiders then head to Little Rock, Ark., to participate in the Philander Smith Classic on Dec. 19-20. Lindsey Wilson faces John Brown (Ark.) the first day before taking on hosts Philander Smith (Ark.) on Dec. 20 for the final game of the 2014 calendar year.

Lindsey Wilson opens 2015 on Jan. 3 against national semifinalists Mid-America Nazarene (Kan.) before home contests with Martin Methodist (Jan. 5) and Fisk (Tenn.) (Jan. 10).

The Blue Raiders then hit the road for a pair of games against in-state MSC opponents Pikeville (Ky.) and Cumberlands (Ky.). Lindsey Wilson faces Pikeville, who ranked No. 5 in the postseason poll, on Jan. 15 followed by a Jan. 17 game in Williamsburg, Ky., against Cumberlands.

The Blue Raiders face Cumberland (Tenn.) on Nov. 22 before again facing Cumberlands (Jan. 29) and Pikeville (Jan. 31) for the final time in the regular season.

Lindsey Wilson hits the road for four of the final six regular-season games in February starting with a Feb. 5 meeting in Campbellsville and a Feb. 7 trip to St. Catharine. The Blue Raiders host Georgetown (Feb. 12) and Shawnee State (Feb. 14) in the final home game of the year before traveling to Life (Feb. 21) and Cumberland (Feb. 26) for the regular-season finale.

to catch bass anytime, and another titled “Big Bass: A Different Animal.”

“Mark is one of the better known and most loved anglers in America today,” Partin said. “All anglers are going to be interested in these.”

Joining Menendez at this year’s Expo will be Gary Keeton of Knight and Hale’s Ultimate Hunting to provide a seminar on deer and elk hunting and calling, Steve Phillips, a professional trapper and owner of Trappers Paradise, to speak about trapping methods, and Dave Skinner, a Whitetail Properties Land Management Specialist to teach attendees how to develop their property to attract and maintain deer.

“We have some of the premier seminars you’ll find, not only in Kentucky, but at any outdoor expo,” Partin said. “We really encourage people to take advantage of the opportunity to hear these, and they’re free to the public—we don’t charge anything at all to attend them.”

The only cost associated with the Expo is the $5 admission fee for those older than 12. Anyone under age 12 is admitted free. Additionally, anyone who purchases a ticket for admission will be automatically entered into this year’s giveaway contest, where the grand prize is again a John Deere Gator.

“The Gator giveaway is always a huge attraction,” Partin explained. “Limestone Farm Lawn

Work Site makes the giveaway possible, and people really look forward to the opportunity to win.”

The drawing is held at the end of the Expo, and you must be present to win.

There will also be a drawing at the end of the day for children 12-and-under, who are not eligible to win the Gator. The grand prize for children will be a Matthews bow, with other prizes and giveaways also available.

“The show is geared toward the entire family,” Partin said of the Expo, which is presented in cooperation with Jones Chapel United Methodist Church. “There will be an indoor BB gun range and archery available for the children as well.”

Joining the vendors and seminars, the Kentucky Mega Bucks display will return again this year, featuring the largest deer taken in the state during the last hunting season. Alongside the Mega Bucks, local sportsman Sammy Blair will display the Adair County Deer Classic, which will feature the biggest and finest bucks taken in Adair County only. Towering over the two displays will be Bulletproof, the world record velvet antler buck taken in 2012 by Thad Cartwright.

“Everyone has heard about Bulletproof and seen him in every magazine in the country, but this is an opportunity to see a 283 5/8-inch, 50-point velvet buck in person,” Partin said.

As always, free deer scoring will be available to anyone who wants to bring a previously unscored deer to the show. Dale Weddle, who is certified to score in Pope and Young, Boone and Crockett, and Buckmasters, among other record books, will provide the service.

The Expo will conclude with an awards ceremony from competitions held both Friday and Saturday, which feature the 2014 Kentucky Turkey Calling Championships, the 2014 Kentucky Still Target Championships, and various other calling and shooting events—all of which represent a chance to advance to either state, national, or world competitions. The events will play host to numerous past state, national and world champions, and the competition figures to be steep yet again this year. The ceremony will also honor the Kentucky Christian Academy Middle School Archery Team, who recently took home the 2014 NASP National Championship and a second-place finish at the world competition.

“We are so excited about this year’s show and what we have to offer,” Partin began. “But we’re also excited for the community. This expo has multiple impacts for our county and the people of the county. It’s one of the largest one-day shows of its kind in the nation, and it takes place right here in Adair County.”

Lindsey Wilson College Freshmen Get An “Edge” On Their College Careers

A total of 172 incoming Lindsey Wilson College freshmen put the final preparations on college on Friday and Saturday. The students participated in the college’s EDGE orientation program.

EDGE -- which stands for education, development, growth and experience -- is an orientation program for incoming freshmen. The day introduces freshmen to the LWC community and gives them several opportunities to meet the college’s faculty, staff and students. In the morning, student EDGE leaders conduct team-building sessions that introduce freshmen to other new incoming students. A total of 310 incoming LWC freshmen participated in the summer’s first three EDGE days.

Athletes start to return to campus over the next several weeks, and opening weekend will be Aug. 15-17. The 2014 fall semester begins Aug. 20.
